

MORE CLUBS PULLED.

The work of closing the drinking places goes on. The crusade of the county officers against the violators of the prohibitory law goes merrily on. Last night Sheriff Burdge closed John Larson's club at 300 Kansas avenue, and John Neddio at Rossville. The place of James and Edward Conwell has also been closed. Conwell's club having for its aim (on paper) "the inculcation of a desire for education in the higher branches of literature and the sciences," has been closed, and its pretty charter with its big gilt seal and red ribbon, signed by Secretary of State Osborn and framed in a showy but cheap frame, has been confiscated along with sixteen gallons of beer and $150 worth of club fixtures. This club was the "English and German Educational association," having also for its aim "the conduction of a school of instruction in the English and German languages; and to aid members in case of sickness or death." The incorporators are Jim Conwell, W. D. Marquette, N. Kantrowitz, Robert Faulkner and Bob Kneiser. Just what branch of education the incorporators presided over is not clear, but as the club possessed at least five chairs, there is one for each of them. Their club was located in the little cottage near the northeast corner of Fifth and Quincy streets. It was chartered for ninety-nine years, but as it was only incorporated three months ago, it is entitled under its charter to operate 98 2/3 years more, subject to official interference. The warrants called for the arrests of James and Edward Conwell, both of whom were arrested and placed under $1,000 bond each. They furnished the bond, with H. K. Rowley and James Love as security.

A club on Third Street. Julius Larson operated "The Stone-masons' Mutual Aid Society," at the rear of the Heery building, at 300 Kansas avenue. These parties aided each other in getting and disposing of beer. When the sheriff called last evening there were several men there drinking beer, and there were only a few drops left in the bottom of the keg. They said there were merely having a social drink, but they had an improved beer-pump and all the fixtures of a well-established club. Larson's bond was fixed at $1,000 by Judge Hazen, which he has been asked to give. There are seven counts against him.

One from Rossville. It is charged that John Neddio sold whisky in connection with his restaurant and confectionery trade at Rossville. At any rate Deputy Sheriff Dan Jones went up last evening armed with warrant to that effect and brought Neddio back to Topeka.

There are only two counts against him so his bond is only $300. He is still locked up in default of bail.

DEMOCRATIC INTENTIONS.

The Executive Committee Meets in the City Today. The executive committee of the state Democratic central committee is in session this afternoon at the Throop. The meeting is held to decide upon plans of a campaign, and confer with the candidates on the state ticket.

J. S. Richardson, the chairman of the committee, came in this morning from Wichita. "We will make a decisive campaign," said he. "I feel that we have a chance to win in the fight, and we will do our best and leave the results to take care of themselves. I am not giving out any figures about the Democratic vote. It is too early, and I would not do so anyhow, but I feel very hopeful."

"Since I came to Topeka and before I came," continued Mr. Richardson, "both Republicans and Populists told me that they would support the Democratic state ticket. These men who are disgruntled, the Republicans who favor free silver, and Populists who are opposed to woman suffrage. The Democrats are out squarely against woman suffrage. The Populists are for it, and no one knows where the Republicans stand, so it is natural that we should get those who are radically opposed to the measure."

"Will the Democrats nominate a candidate for congress in the Seventh district?" questioned the JOURNAL reporter. "No, I think they will not. Our convention meets at Hutchinson August 6, and while it is pretty hard to tell what the 117 delegates will do, I predict that no one will be put up against Jerry Simpson who will be renominated by the Populists. The Democrats have twice endorsed him in their conventions and while I am in favor of a straight ticket, I do not believe we will get one."

RAILROAD NOTES.

Paragraphs That Will Interest Railroad Men and the Public.

The night trains on the Union Pacific will not be reinstated until further notice.

The Rock Island officials do not say what they will do about the late wrecking of the last bridge in the Cheokos Strip. They say it is a government affair and it was interference with the mails and the workings of the interstate commerce law.

A extra train of sixteen cars of bananas went north on the Rock Island through Topeka this morning. They were from Cuba and were bound for northern points.

The rain of last night was only a light local shower.

Sells Bros. show travels in thirty-two cars in two trains. It came in on the Santa Fe from Lawrence and will leave tonight for Junction City over the Union Pacific.

A passenger who came in over the Rock Island this morning, says that yesterday while coming through Kiova county, the train passed a cornfield which was in terrible shape. There was no corn on the stalks at all, and a big board sign read, "Jesus my all to heaven is gone; I've saved my fodder, but lost my corn."

ALL ALONG THE LINES.

News Items Interesting to Railroaders and the Public.

The trouble on the Rock Island being over all the city ticket offices closed last week will be reopened Monday. The one in Topeka has already been opened.

The Rock Island has this week taken a chair car each of tourists from Hutchinson and Manhattan to Colorado. W. E. Dauchy, the Rock Island superintendent of maintenance and construction, has returned from Colorado.

The Trans-Missouri Passenger association will meet in Kansas City next Tuesday to talk local rates. T. J. Anderson of the Rock Island and W. J. Black of the Santa Fe expect to attend.

The Santa Fe has completed its line into Cripple Creek, Col.

If the Santa Fe Capital City are not dead they might challenge the Santa Fe nine at Deming, N. M., which is spoiling for a game.

A woman named P. Ryan was arrested and thrown into the New Mexico penitentiary for "assaulting a conductor with words."

The Albuquerque papers say that the Santa Fe trains are all running down there but are mostly late.

The A. R. U. men at Pueblo have declared the strike off so far as they are concerned and many of them have gone back to work, says the Chieftain.

IN RAILROAD CIRCLES.

Gossip Among the Railroad Shops and Offices.

J. M. Emory, a well known Santa Fe employe at Arkansas City, died this week. He was for several years master mechanic at Arkansas City.

J. W. Stalley, formerly of the Pueblo Star visited the Santa Fe offices today.

Mrs. O. H. Spencer of the Santa Fe freight auditing department will spend Sunday in St. Joseph.

Horace Troutman of the freight auditing department of the Santa Fe offices will visit over Sunday in Kansas City.

Miss Mattie Payne of the Santa Fe general superintendent's office will visit in Kansas City over Sunday.

Fred Connors of the stationery department of the Santa Fe offices left today for Chicago and Racine, Wis., to be gone a few days.

T. Y. Horton of the Santa Fe freight auditing department is in Lawrence to stay over Sunday.

The Santa Fe seems to have paid its discharged and laid off employes most everywhere except at Topeka. The Colorado men were paid this week and so were the Argentine men. Those at Emporia were paid yesterday. It is thought the men here will be paid the first of next week but there is no official announcement of it yet.

It is announced that the Santa Fe will soon begin the construction of a new line of road from Deming to Fairbank, in Arizona. The portion of the road between Fairbank and Benson will be taken up and laid from Fairbank toward Deming, passing through Tombstone and down toward the Guadalupe canon.

GAVE ADVICE.

And Found He Had Planned His Daughter's Elopement.

The proprietor of one of the principal firms in Norristown had remarked that his head clerk, for whom he had a real liking, had for some reason fallen into a great melancholy, and though he tried his best he could not find out what was the matter with the young man. One day at last the sufferer owned that he was in love. "Oh, but," here the young man nearly broke down, "she belongs to one of the best families in the town—the parents will never consent." "Pooh! your position is good, your name honorable, they won't refuse. I will demand the girl for you. Does she love you?" "Yes, but it's no use; her parents won't listen." Well, then, slope with her. Do I know the girl?" "Yes, she will be at your hall next Tuesday; awfully pretty." "Perfect! Now listen to me," said the employer. "Leave the ball quietly with her. Joseph, my coachman, will wait for you at the door and drive you to the station. He will ask no questions. When you are out of the way I will see the father and settle everything for you."

"Is that really your advice?" gleefully exclaims the youth. "Do you want me to do it?" "Yes, I command you to do it. Now cheer up." The next day the clerk proposed the scheme to his sweetheart, who made some objections at first, but overcome by his reasons she said at last, "Well, if he really orders it, I must obey." What was the general stupefaction when after the ball the daughter of the house was missing. "Mad fool that I was," exclaimed the enraged parent. "It was my own daughter." The next day he wrote: "Come back; I will be forgiven."

SYNDICATED AFFECTIONS.

The Very Best She Could Do in Treatment of a Lover.

He wanted her for all his own, as some foolish lovers do, but she was not an emotional monopolist of that kind.

On the contrary she had syndicated her affections, and there were half a dozen young men each of whom was quite as much to her as was this young Romeo J. Gould.

Not only had she disposed of a number of blocks of stock in her heart, but she gloried in it with true speculative pride, and when he would seek to claim her as his own, she would taunt him with it and tell him she could not afford to make an emotional specialty of him, and that he must be content with what she felt inclined to let him have.

"Oh, cruel woman!"

"Spare my tender feelings!" he cried to her one evening in the gloaming after she had told him how his account stood. "Spare my tender feelings!"

She smiled with sardonic sweetness. "I'm sorry I can't accommodate you," she responded, using a well-known brand of commercial or business tone of voice on his plea—"real sorry—but I can't. The best I can do for you is to tender my spare feelings."

Then, after the long depression, the crash came, and he sunk into hopeless emotional bankruptcy.

A NEW DISEASE.

The Victims Literally Sleep Their Lives Away.

"Among the many discoveries made by European land-grabbers on the west coast of Africa is a distinctly new disease," said Alfred F. Donett of London, England. "I was out on the coast last year and saw several men die of a malady which defied the most experienced physicians. The only symptom shows exceptional dislike to getting up in the morning, and very soon he falls to sleep almost every time he sits down or quits physical exertion. Finally the patient sleeps almost incessantly, and has to be aroused in order that nourishment may be administered. No treatment seems to have the slightest effect on this disease, and I can scarcely imagine anything more painful than to see, as I did, an intimate friend and companion literally sleep away his life, dying finally of starvation and exhaustion. Almost every white man I met talked of the disease and had a more or less rational theory to account for its presence and fatal influence. As a general thing a tendency to sleepiness is regarded as a good thing by doctors, and to hear it said that a man's life is in danger because he insists on sleeping after dinner sounds very much in the nature of a paradox."

Not Down in the Books.

A boy was once brought before "Old Steady" Baker, the mayor of Folkestone, for stealing gooseberries. Baker turned over to Burn's "Justice," but not being able to find the article he wanted in the book, which is alphabetically arranged, he lifted up his spectacles and addressed the culprit thus: "My lad, it's very lucky for you that, instead of stealing gooseberries, you were not brought here for stealing a goose; there is a statute against stealing geese, but I can't find anything about gooseberries in all Burn's so let the prisoner be discharged, for I suppose it is no offense."

New Theory of Auroral Light.

The latest theory concerning the cause of the aurora borealis has been deduced from a careful analysis of that light thrown through a spectroscopic. This unique experiment clearly establishes the fact that it is caused by an electrical discharge among the particles of meteoric iron dust contained in the atmosphere.

CURIOUS STORM PHENOMENA.

How Birds Are Stripped and Trees Bent to Pieces.

Among the most astonishing effects of whirlwinds must be reckoned the well-supported facts that, on their cessation, birds exposed to them have been found stripped of their feathers, and people with every shred of clothing torn from them. These effects cannot possibly be ascribed to the wind. The force necessary would have sufficed to transport the objects away bodily.

Numerous similar occurrences were observed in France in the tornadoes which prevailed there three years ago, and these were gradually brought under investigation. Over the whole region effected, trees were found rent in a manner which could not possibly have resulted from a wind. These were, first, oaks split down the center for a length of twenty to twenty-five feet; second, poplars and beeches, for lengths of from six to twelve feet, were shivered into sticks of uniform thickness (for example, a beech tree, sixteen inches in diameter, was split into more than five hundred sticks a centimeter thick, two centimeters broad and three and one-half centimeters long); third, firs and other resinous trees had their stems cut clean through, leaving almost even surfaces.

These phenomena, and others of kindred nature, can be ascribed only to electricity. How else could we explain the case of two casks standing alongside each other, the one of which, the filled one, was completely destroyed (exploded), while the other, the empty one, remained uninjured?

"LITTLE BLACK BOY DREAM."

How an Englishman Was Saved From Being Murdered by an Indian Lad.

The most remarkable dream, or rather series of dreams, ever related is that which has gone down into history as "The Little Black Boy Dream." Mr. Seafeld gives the story on page 302 of the second volume of his "Literature and Curiosities of Dreams." It is also fully related and illustrated in "Signs, Omens, Dreams, and Apparitions." An Englishman, whom we shall call Mr. Hartley, was residing in India. He wished to make a trip into the interior and took with him only an Indian lad of 12 years. On the first night after leaving, Mrs. Hartley aroused her brother-in-law, who was sleeping in an adjoining room, her screams having been occasioned by dreaming that the "little black boy" was murdering her husband. While the brother-in-law was quieting Mrs. H.—screams were heard upstairs and on investigation it proved that another lady of the household had had a dream precisely similar to that of Mrs. H.—They were all pretty well worked up over the matter until the afternoon of the following day, when Mr. Hartley returned, although he had expected to be absent a week. He gave as his only excuse for not continuing the journey that the night before he had dreamed that "the little black boy" intended to murder him!

It is needless to add that the Hartleys always believed that "the little black boy" was prevented from committing murder by the three providential coincident dreams.

The Soldier Was a Diplomatist.

A good story of the duke of Wellington is told. After one of the battles in Spain he invited a young officer who had exhibited conspicuous bravery to dine with him in his tent. Riding by some short while afterward, the duke overheard the young man exultantly proclaim:

"I am going to dine with Wellington to-night."

"You might vouchsafe me the prefix of 'Mr.' at least, Captain—," remarked the duke, dryly.

"Not at all, my lord," retorted the unabashed youth; "I should not speak of Mr. Caesar, or Mr. Alexander, so why should I talk of Mr. Wellington?"

It Was a Needle.

As Dr. J. S. Morey of Royerford, Penn., was examining Howard, a two-year-old son of James Kline, he noticed a spot in the right side where the flesh was quite hard. Closer examination disclosed the fact that something was lodged there, and after cutting the flesh, a long, rusty needle was removed. The supposition is that the child swallowed the needle some time ago, and that it was gradually working to the surface.

Pope Innocent and the Witches.

The belief in witchcraft is believed to have been inherited by the early Christians from their pagan forefathers. The witchcraft craze itself was at its height during the latter years of the Dark Ages. In the year 1484 Pope Innocent issued a bull directing the inquisitors to seek out and punish all known witches. Nearly 100,000 persons were executed in one year as a result of the issuance of that bull.

Unexpected.

It was his first season at the seaside, and to the critical observer there were noticeable in his manner traces of nervousness. Yet he boldly wandered along the beach with the girl in the red blazer. The conversation had reached a juncture which left him no alternative. "Be mine," he urged with trembling voice. "Yes," she rejoined. He pressed his hand to his brow. "This is so sudden," he faltered.

Laughing Crows.

There is a species of crow in India which assembles in flocks of about twenty or thirty in the recesses of forests, and whose note is exactly like the human voice in loud laughing, so that a person ignorant of the real cause would fancy that a very merry party was close at hand.
